SUBJECT: Results of SRV sessions for week of 24-28 August, 1987.

1. TARGET: The target was to describe the picture on the cover of the 7 September 87 issue of Newsweek Magazine.

2. SESSIONS: Several sessions were attempted this week, but constant interference prevented successful completion. Final session was completed the following Monday. Results presented here cover material gained from all sessions.

3. RESULTS: There is a recurrent "monotone" impression. This first seemed to be indicative of "old-timey" or "old-fashioned" scene, but later broke out to a scene which is reminiscent of the old pictures of Russian revolts, complete with people fighting in the city streets, etc. There seems to be a wrought iron gate which is somehow important to the picture. It is very fancy. There are also images of (a) large building(s).

4. RVer's CRITIQUE: The repeated impressions seemed to pan out in the correct order, so that I have a fairly confident feeling about the whole set of them. Having done this final session the following Monday, rather than last Thursday, I have the added benefit/burden of Friday's news about the Phillipines attempted coup, and can easily AOL that the picture will concern that.
